Anybody Home?

This growing hermit crab is feeling cramped. He has outgrown the old borrowed shell he has been living in, and is looking for a new home. When he finds an empty shell, he uses his claws to check out the size.

If the size of the new shell is just right, he cleans the shell carefully. Then, he will quickly pull his abdomen out of the old shell, and stick it into the new one. Home sweet home! (Until he grows larger and needs to move to a bigger shell, that is!)

Which shell will the hermit crab choose?
 Do the math. The hermit crab will select the shell with numbers that add up to an even number.
